Is there an investment opportunity in Ciena?

SUMMARY

- Ciena Corporation (NYSE: CIEN) operates mainly in networking equipment, a sector with single-digit growth. Its organic revenue growth only matched the growth of GDP.
- While profits grew at double-digit rates, this required heavy capital, leading to flat or declining returns on invested capital. Margin improvements were minimal, with gains mostly from fixed-cost discipline.
- The company is cash generative with strong operations, reduced leverage, and a solid cash position, but its high reinvestment rate leaves limited distributions to shareholders.

there an investment opportunity in Ciena?

SUMMARY

- Ciena Corporation (NYSE: CIEN) operates mainly in networking equipment, a sector with single-digit growth. Its organic revenue growth only matched the growth of GDP.
- While profits grew at double-digit rates, this required heavy capital, leading to flat or declining returns on invested capital. Margin improvements were minimal, with gains mostly from fixed-cost discipline.
- The company is cash generative with strong operations, reduced leverage, and a solid cash position, but its high reinvestment rate leaves limited distributions to shareholders.

BACKGROUND

Ciena is a technology company that enhances the internet's speed and efficiency. In simple terms, it builds high-tech equipment to move massive amounts of data across networks. It also develops software to automate and manage these networks, and provides services to help customers deploy and maintain them.

Its operations can be grouped into three categories:

- Network Platforms – hardware such as optical transport, switching, and routing systems.
- Network Software & Services – software for network control and automation, including both the Platform software and Blue Planet operations.
- Global Services – consulting, support, and maintenance for both hardware and software.

The Network Platforms segment dominates, contributing on average about 79% of revenue over the past decade. Despite efforts to expand into software and services, Ciena remains largely a hardware company. Geographically, the Americas (mainly North America) generate roughly two-thirds of total revenue. Refer to Chart 1.

Yet, there is a puzzling divergence between performance and valuation. Over the past decade, Ciena's stock price has trended upward, while its returns on invested capital (ROIC) have declined. This inverse relationship persisted even in the past year. One possible explanation is that the market is pricing in growth expectations.

But this raises a critical question: if the market is growing, why have Ciena's returns been falling - particularly between 2020 and 2024? Shouldn't sustained financial performance matter more than potential market size?

OPERATING PERFORMANCE

Over the past decade, Ciena's revenue growth of 5.7% CAGR came from a mix of organic expansion and acquisitions.

Between 2015 and 2024, the company invested about USD890 million in net CAPEX and USD398 million in cash acquisitions. This spending pattern suggests that roughly one-third of the company's growth was acquisition-driven. Stripping this out, Ciena's organic growth worked out to just 3.8% CAGR, broadly in line with long-term GDP growth.

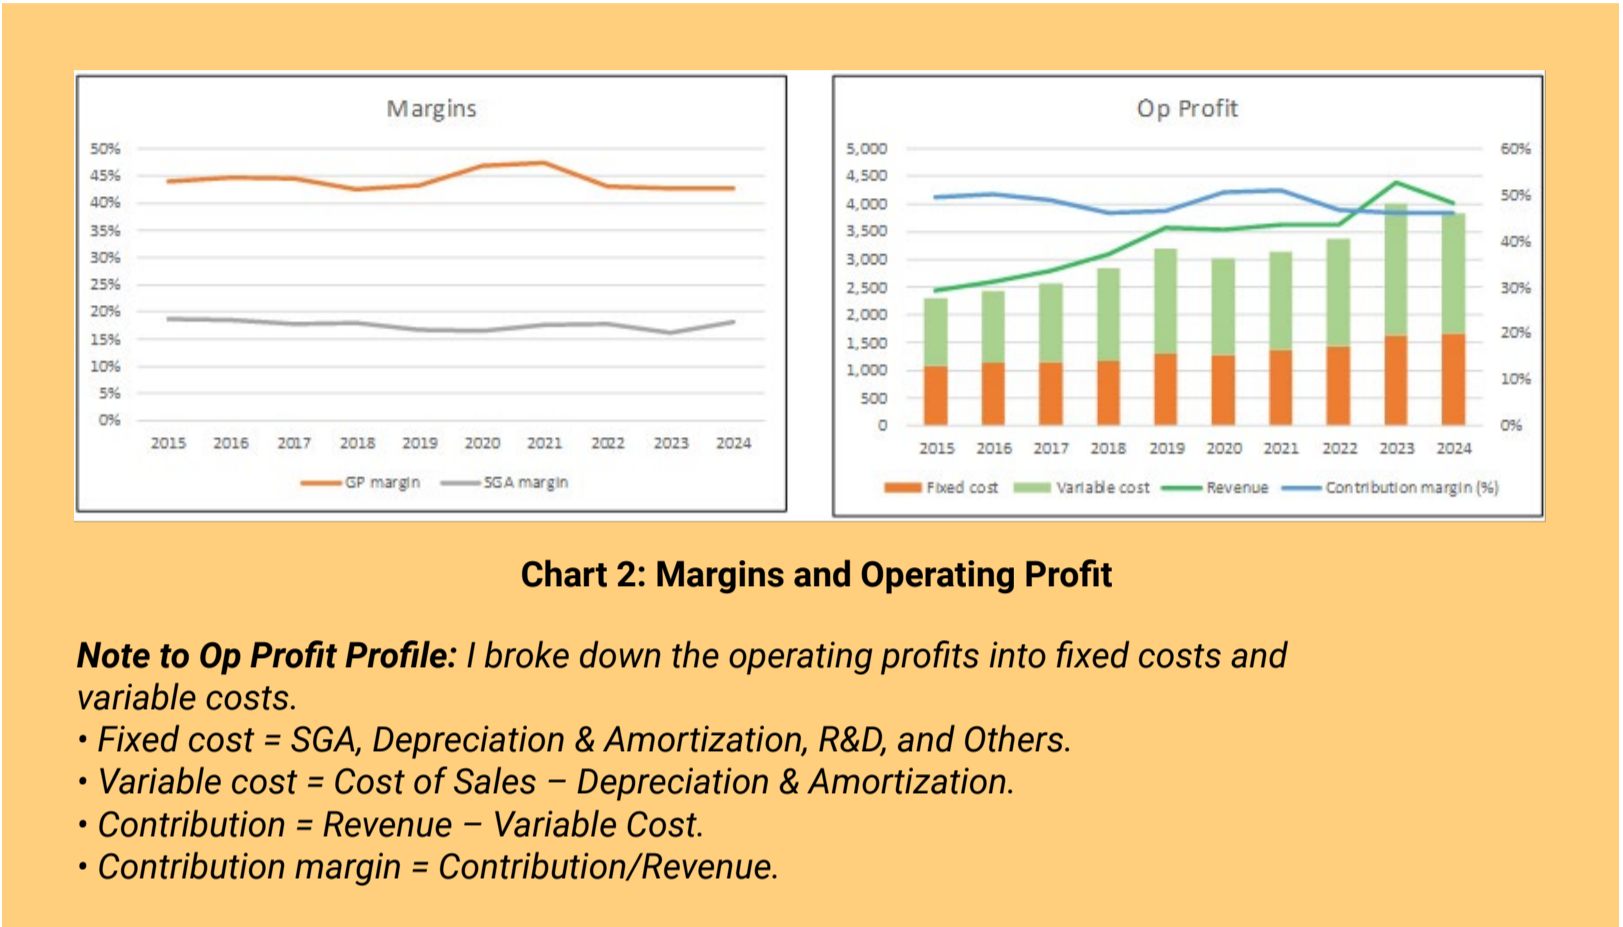

Ciena operates in the communications equipment sector, a business that historically grows slowly. Independent research firms echo this muted outlook: global network equipment is projected to grow at 8.3% CAGR, while the U.S. market is expected to grow at only 2.8% CAGR through 2030. In short, despite the AI hype, industry growth remains single-digit.

Ciena's profits were more volatile than revenue, partly due to unusual tax effects in 2017 and 2018. Adjusting for these, from 2015 to 2024, NOPAT grew at a 4.0% CAGR while PAT grew at a 24.5% CAGR

Returns, however, told a different story. ROIC averaged 11% but declined to 8.7% annually, while ROE averaged 11% but grew at 5.3% CAGR. This divergence was driven by rapid balance sheet expansion. Profits increased, but required ever more capital, leading to falling ROIC and weak ROE growth.

Margins provided little comfort. Gross margin, SGA margin, and contribution margin showed no meaningful improvement over the decade. The one positive sign was better fixed-cost discipline: fixed costs fell from 44% of revenue in 2015/16 to 39% in 2023/24, indicating efficiency in funding R&D and operations. Refer to Chart 2.

PEERS

I compared Ciena's performance with that of peers with similar orders of magnitude of revenue. You can see that Ciena is among the bigger ones in the peer group in terms of revenue, but it had lower revenue growth than the panel average revenue growth. Refer to Table 1.

Company	Revenue
	2024 (USD m)	CGAR 2015 to 2023 (%)
Ciena (CIEN)	4,015	6%
Infinera (INFN)	1,458	6%
Ribbon Comm (RBBN)	834	14%
Marvell Technology (MTVL)	5,376	8%
Adtran (ADTN)	905	5%

Table 1: Peer Revenue

When it came to return on capital, EBIT margin, and EPS, Ciena had the best performance. However, its Levered Free Cash Flow Margin was lower than the panel average.

Overall, I would rate its peer performance as better than average. My analysis in the earlier sections did not point to a very strong business performance by Ceina. Taking this in the context of Ciena's good peer performance, I am more inclined to think that this is a tough sector to be in.

FINANCIAL POSITION

I would rate Ciena's financials as strong and even consider it a cash cow. It has good positive points with one key negative point. The positive points included:

- From 2015 to 2024, except for one year, it delivered positive cash flow from operations every year. During this period, it had a good cash conversion ratio with USD3.0 billion cash flow from operations compared to its USD2.6 billion net income.
- As of May 2025, it had USD1.2 billion in cash and short-term investments, equal to about 23% of its total assets.
- As of May 2025, it had a debt-capital ratio of 35%, down from its 2015 high of 68%.
- It had a good capital allocation plan as shown in Table 2. Its cash flow from operations was more than enough to cover its CAPEX and acquisitions. Excess was returned to shareholders in the form of a share buyback.

- Its negative point was the high Reinvestment rate (Reinvestment/ NOPAT) of 70% over the past decade.

Reinvestment = CAPEX & Acquisitions – (Depreciation & Amortization) + increase in Net Working Capital.

This high Reinvestment rate meant that only 30% of the NOPAT was available for distribution to the shareholders. If I excluded acquisitions, the average Reinvestment rate would reduce to 53%.

VALUATION

Ciena operates in a slow-growth networking equipment market, with organic growth only matching GDP levels. While profits expanded at a double-digit pace, this required significant capital, leaving returns largely flat. Earnings growth came more from fixed cost control than margin expansion. The company remains financially sound and cash generative.

On valuation, two scenarios were tested:

- Scenario 1 (organic growth only of 4%): I obtained an intrinsic value of USD34 per share.
- Scenario 2 (acquisition-driven boost to 15% growth, tapering to 4%): The intrinsic value increased to USD91 per share.

With the stock trading at USD78 per share (Feb 25, 2025), there is no margin of safety under Scenario 1, and only a modest 17% margin of safety under Scenario 2. Refer to the original article for details of the valuation.

CONCLUSION

Ciena remains a financially strong company operating in a structurally slow-growth industry. Its ability to generate consistent cash flow, maintain a solid balance sheet, and control fixed costs demonstrates resilience. However, its reliance on capital-intensive growth has led to declining returns on invested capital, with limited improvement in margins.

From a valuation standpoint, the stock offers little cushion. Under an organic growth path, the intrinsic value is well below the market price. Even under an acquisition-driven growth scenario, the margin of safety is modest.

For a long-term value investor, this suggests that Ciena is more of a cash-generative, steady business than a compelling growth story. Unless future acquisitions deliver sustained returns without eroding capital efficiency, the valuation does not offer an attractive entry point.

I am a long-term value investor who has held onto stocks for more than 5 years. My analysis and valuation are from such a perspective. I consider quarterly results "noisy" and focus on long-term trends.

Domestic financial markets remained orderly despite global volatility - BNM

According to Bank Negara Malaysia (BNM) in its Financial Stability Review for the 1H2025 (FSR 1H 2025), Malaysia's financial market conditions remained orderly despite heightened global volatility, driven by US tariff developments, concerns over global growth and geopolitical tensions. The Financial Market Stress Index (FMSI) peaked in May but has since moderated, reflecting stabilisation across all asset classes.

The Ringgit appreciated by 6.1% against the US dollar between March and September 2025, driven largely by external developments. Malaysia's favourable economic prospects, ongoing structural reforms and continued engagements with corporates are expected to provide ongoing support for the ringgit.

In the first half of 2025, business operations remained resilient, supported by resilient domestic demand and sustained economic activity. However, profitability was constrained by persistent cost pressures, particularly in sectors affected by higher labour and material costs. Despite these challenges, businesses maintained their financial strength. The median interest coverage ratio stood at 6.2 times, while the share of firms-at-risk remained stable at 24.4%.

The credit quality of business loans was sustained, with the impairment ratio unchanged at 3.1%. While a small segment of small and medium enterprises (SMEs) continued to face repayment challenges, signs of financial stress remained contained. The share of SME loans under repayment assistance programmes continued to decline, accounting for 4.1% of total SME loans and just 0.7% of total loans in the banking system and development financial institutions.

Looking ahead, the operating environment is expected to remain challenging in the second half of 2025. Nonetheless, moderating input prices and firms' ongoing cost management strategies are expected to alleviate some of the pressures. Additionally, strong domestic demand and continued investment activity will remain as key pillars supporting business resilience.

While the household debt-to-GDP ratio edged slightly higher to 84.8%, borrowers' debt-servicing capacity remained healthy, underpinned by banks' prudent lending standards. Key indicators of debt repayment capacity remained sound, with the median debt service ratio (DSR) at 41% for newly approved loans and 33% for outstanding loans.

Overall, the quality of household borrowings remained sound, with the loan impairment ratio unchanged at 1.1%. The share of household loans under repayment assistance programmes continued to decline, reflecting sustained repayment behaviour. Despite ongoing cost-of-living pressures, signs of financial stress among household borrowers remained limited and contained, with no evidence of widespread deterioration in repayment trends.

Financial institutions continued to demonstrate strong operational resilience in the first half of 2025. In response to persistent cyber threats, institutions significantly enhanced their cybersecurity capabilities, enabling more effective threat detection, containment and response. These efforts have helped minimise operational disruptions and reinforce trust in the system.

According to BNM Deputy Governor Aznan Abdul Aziz, fraud risks

have increasingly shifted towards authorised scams involving social engineering tactics. In response, BNM and the financial industry have strengthened fraud detection measures and expanded public awareness initiatives. This includes the ongoing upgrade of the National Fraud Portal to enhance the tracing of suspicious transactions and better protect victims.

The Real-time Electronic Transfer of Funds and Securities System (RENTAS) and major retail payment systems (RPS) maintained high levels of system availability throughout the first half of 2025, with no major operational or cyber incidents reported. As regional cross-border Quick Response (QR) payment connectivity continues to expand, BNM will further strengthen its oversight of cross-border payment arrangements. This will be achieved through close collaboration with relevant regulatory authorities to ensure continued resilience and security of these systems.

Malaysia's financial institutions continued to play a pivotal role in supporting economic activity during the first half of 2025. As of end-June 2025, the banking system's total capital ratio stood at 18.2%, with excess capital buffers of RM138.9 billion. Similarly, the insurance and takaful sector remained well-capitalised, recording an aggregate capital adequacy ratio of 223% and excess capital buffers of RM42 billion. These buffers ensure that financial institutions remain well-positioned to absorb unexpected losses while continuing to meet the financing and protection needs of households and businesses as economic activity expands. Click this link for the Financial Stability Review 1st Half 2025 Report.

Tradeview & Funding Societies Launch Private Credit Fund for Malaysian SMEs

Malaysians can now invest in local small and medium enterprises (SMEs) through a wholesale fund with the launch of the Tradeview Funding Societies Income Fund (TFSIF). It focuses on underserved but creditworthy businesses with strong repayment records.

The fund is a result of the collaboration between boutique asset management firm Tradeview Capital and peer-to-peer (P2P) financing platform operator Funding Societies Malaysia. Both are licensed by the Securities Commission Malaysia.

The TFSIF targets sophisticated investors with a medium- to long-term investment horizon. With a minimum investment amount of RM10,000 at an initial unit price of RM1.00, it aims to generate an absolute return of 6% per annum to the investors, which will be distributed monthly. Subsequent top-ups will be of the same amount.

A Credit Enhancement Reserve of up to 10% of net investment deposits supports the fund's benchmark return and cushions early credit losses. Some notes are backed by registrable collateral or third-party guarantees from CGC Digital Malaysia, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Credit Guarantee Corporation, providing a multi-layered protection structure.

The fund imposes a sales charge of up to 2% of the net investment amount, while annual management fee is up to 1.5% per annum. The initial offer period shall be for a period of not more than 45 calendar days from the launch of the fund.

According to its press release, the fund is structured as an open-ended wholesale fixed income vehicle, offering investors monthly income distributions and liquidity opportunities. It combines the complementary strengths of both partners - Tradeview Capital's disciplined fund management approach and Funding Societies' SME origination and risk analytics platform - to create a professionally managed, diversified portfolio that prioritises investment stability.

The fund supports real economic growth as capital is channelled directly into brick-and-mortar local SMEs to support their businesses.

Tradeview Capital's chief investment officer Nixon Wong said that they have always believed that SMEs are the greatest economic asset of the country. This initiative seeks to strengthen the role of SMEs as the pillar of Malaysia's economy, accounting for 39.5% of GDP and employing 8.1 million people as according to the Department of Statistics Malaysia. He added that by facilitating access to growth capital, the fund aims to enhance SME resilience, while offering investors stable and sustainable returns.

Meanwhile, according to Funding Societies country head Chai Kien Poon, TFSIF will connect institutional and sophisticated investors directly to the SMEs, driving Malaysia's economy by offering the opportunity to earn predictable income while contributing to national growth. He noted that both Funding Societies and Tradeview Capital started as SMEs and as such understand the challenges of SMEs first-hand and share a deep commitment to empowering the growth of Malaysian businesses.

As at Oct 16, Tradeview Capital has crossed RM100 million in assets under management and achieved profitability within three years since it was first launched. Its flagship product, the Tradeview Sustainable Fund, has continued to deliver an average return of 11.2% per annum since its launch in 2022.

Meanwhile, Funding Societies brings a proven regional track record, having disbursed over RM20 billion to more than 100,000 SMEs through five million financing notes across Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, Thailand and Vietnam.
