Limbach: Operationally Strong, Priced for Perfection

SUMMARY

- Since 2020, Nasdaq's Limbach Holdings Inc. (NASDAQ:LMB) has deliberately pivoted from lower-margin, higher-risk construction work (CCR) toward higher-margin, recurring owner-direct services (ODR), improving business quality and reducing execution risk.
- Despite modest revenue growth, margins, operating leverage, and returns have improved materially, with ROIC rising to above 20%, driven by better project selection, ODR mix, and tighter cost control.
- ODR aligns with the slow-growing but stable facilities maintenance market, offering recurring revenue and long-term customer relationships rather than cyclical construction demand.

SUMMARY

- Since 2020, Nasdaq's Limbach Holdings Inc. (NASDAQ:LMB) has deliberately pivoted from lower-margin, higher-risk construction work (GCR) toward higher-margin, recurring owner-direct services (ODR), improving business quality and reducing execution risk.
- Despite modest revenue growth, margins, operating leverage, and returns have improved materially, with ROIC rising to above 20%, driven by better project selection, ODR mix, and tighter cost control.
- ODR aligns with the slow-growing but stable facilities maintenance market, offering recurring revenue and long-term customer relationships rather than cyclical construction demand.

BACKGROUND

Limbach’s current corporate structure traces back to a 2016 merger with a special purpose acquisition company (SPAC). This transaction transformed Limbach from a non-operating SPAC into a fully operational mechanical, electrical, and plumbing (MEP) contracting company.

Today, Limbach reports its operations under two business segments:

- General Contractor Relationships (GCR): In this segment, Limbach operates as a subcontractor on large-scale construction projects led by general contractors. These projects typically carry lower margins and higher execution risk.
- Owner Direct Relationships (ODR): Under this model, Limbach works directly with building owners to provide recurring services such as maintenance, system upgrades, and smaller capital projects. ODR projects are generally higher margin, lower risk, and support long-term customer relationships.

Since the 2016 merger, Limbach’s revenue history can be divided into two distinct periods.

- From 2017 to 2020, revenue growth was driven by expansion in both the GCR and ODR segments (see the left side of Chart 1).
- From 2021 onward, GCR revenue declined while ODR revenue continued to grow. As a result, total revenue in 2021 fell below the 2020 level.

Chart 1: Segment Revenue and Gross Profit

Importantly, this post-2020 revenue decline was intentional and strategic, rather than demand-driven. Management deliberately shifted the business model away from lower-margin, higher-risk construction work toward higher-quality, recurring, and lower-risk ODR projects. This shift prioritized margin improvement, risk reduction, and long-term customer relationships over headline revenue growth.

This repositioning produced a meaningful improvement in gross profitability. As shown on the right side of Chart 1, GCR gross profit declined after 2020, while ODR gross profit increased steadily. Overall, Limbach's total gross profit in 2024 was significantly higher than in 2017, despite lower total revenue.

Against this backdrop, my analysis focuses on two key questions:

- What challenges and opportunities does Limbach face in sustaining this strategic shift toward ODR?
- Does the current market price fully reflect the long-term potential of this higher-quality business model?

To answer these questions, I begin by examining the demand dynamics of the ODR segment.

DEMAND FOR ODR SERVICES

The ODR segment does not fit neatly within the traditional construction market. Instead, it aligns more closely with the building and facilities maintenance ecosystem. To assess demand, I first identified several defining characteristics of the ODR market:

- Essential, compliance-driven services.
- Shift from capital to operational spending.
- Concentration in specialized verticals.
- Higher technical skill requirements

In contrast, growth in the GCR segment depends primarily on new facility construction. Because companies do not build new facilities frequently, growth in GCR often requires continually winning new customers.

The ODR model, however, allows Limbach to generate recurring revenue from existing customers through maintenance agreements and long-term service contracts. This makes ODR fundamentally aligned with the building and facilities maintenance market rather than the cyclical construction market.

The building and facilities maintenance market is generally a single-digit growth market, as reflected in several industry studies.

OPERATING PERFORMANCE

Between 2017 and 2024, Limbach generated little revenue growth, yet profitability improved materially. Profit after tax (PAT) rose from near breakeven in 2017 to USD31 million in 2024, driven by margin expansion and tighter control over fixed costs.

This improvement reflects both mix and execution. The ODR segment consistently delivers higher margins than GCR (right side of Chart 2). While GCR margins were structurally lower, they improved post-2020 as the company deliberately scaled back lower-quality projects and focused on better-margin work. At the same time, ODR gross margins continued to expand.

The combined effect was a sustained increase in overall gross margins after 2020 (left side of Chart 2). More importantly, Selling, General and Administrative (“SG&A”) expenses grew at a slower pace than gross profit, leading to meaningful operating leverage.

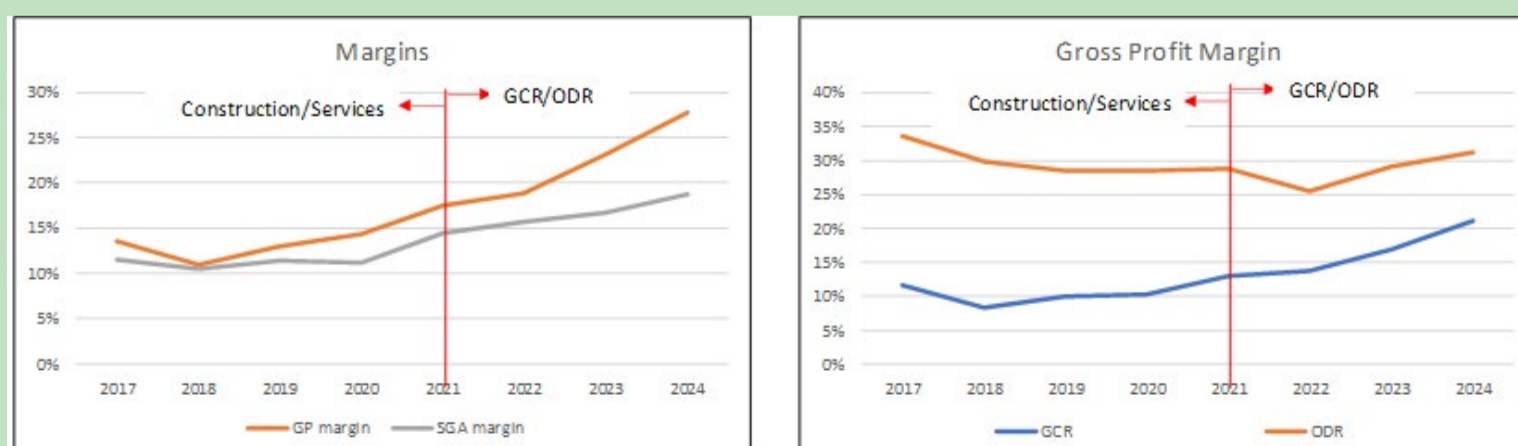

Chart 2: Margins

*Please refer to the disclaimer on first page and last page.

As a result, average operating margins rose from 1.5% (2017–2020) to 5.0% (2021–2024). Capital employed grew more slowly than profits, driving a sharp improvement in returns:

- ROIC increased from 5% in 2017 to 21% in 2024
- ROE rose from 1% to 20% over the same period

Several factors suggest these gains are sustainable. The company continues to shift toward the higher-margin ODR business, with ODR revenue, gross profit, operating margins, and net income all trending upward post-2020 (Chart 1).

Recent acquisitions, including ACME and Industrial Air, are consistent with this strategy and expand Limbach's ODR capabilities. That said, management cautions that the transition to an ODR-centric model must proceed at an appropriate scale and pace.

REINVESTMENT

Growth needs to be funded, and one metric for this is the reinvestment rate (Reinvestment/NOPAT).

From 2021 to 2024, Limbach's reported reinvestment rate averaged 108%, inflated by acquisition activity. Excluding acquisitions, the reinvestment rate falls to a more sustainable 15%.

Over the long term, reinvestment should converge toward levels implied by the fundamental growth relationship:

Growth = ROIC × Reinvestment rate

Assuming a 4% long-term growth rate and the average ROIC of 15% over the past 4 years, the reinvestment rate = 27%.

Should Limbach's reinvestment rate move towards this fundamental rate, we would expect more free cash flow being generated.

FINANCIAL POSITION

I rated Limbach as moderately sound financially, as its positive points outweigh its negative ones. Its positive points included the following:

- As of Sep 2025, while the company had USD10 million in cash (equal to about 2% of total assets), it had a 46% Debt Equity ratio that had come down from its 2019 high of 139%.
- It had a good cashflow conversion ratio. From 2017 to 2024, it generated USD165 million from the cash flow from operations compared to the cumulative USD68 million PAT.
- It had a good capital allocation track record, with the CAPEX and acquisitions fully covered by the cash flow from operations. Refer to Table 1.

Item	Sources USD m	Uses USD m
Cash flow from Ops	165
New shares	26
Net Debt		30
Acquisition		71
CAPEX		19
Dividends		1
Buybacks		23
Misc		48
Total	192	192

Table 2: Sources and Uses of Funds 2017 to 2024

Its negative points were:

- Over the past 8 years, there were 3 years with negative cash flow from operations.
- It had an average unsustainable reinvestment rate based on the post-2020 performance.
- In terms of liquidity, the company reported a current ratio of 1.4 as of Sep 2025.

VALUATION

My analysis shows that Limbach had yet to deliver its full potential. The value of Limbach would then depend on the path to full potential. Rather than attempt to do this, I decided to reverse engineer the market price of USD79 per share (27 Mar 2025).

The current market price implies very optimistic operating assumptions.

- Revenue growth is priced at 15% next year, tapering to 4% by Year 6, despite Limbach's relatively short post-2020 growth track record.
- EBIT margins are assumed to expand from about 8% to 11%, effectively assigning Limbach the highest margin achieved by peers.
- Capital efficiency is expected to improve materially, with reinvestment converging toward levels implied by the fundamental growth equation.
- ROIC rising from 21% (2024) to 26% in the terminal year.

Overall, the market appears to be looking past Limbach's limited post-2020 operating history and pricing in near-best-case growth, margin, and return outcomes. This leaves little margin of safety and suggests that the stock is over-priced. Refer to the original article for details of the valuation.

CONCLUSION

Limbach has meaningfully improved its business quality since 2020 by shifting away from lower-margin construction work toward higher-margin, owner-direct service relationships. This strategic pivot has led to stronger margins, operating leverage, and materially higher returns, making Limbach a better business today than in the past.

The ODR model offers a more stable earnings base, supported by recurring demand and long-term customer relationships, and recent acquisitions are consistent with this strategy. While execution risks remain, the operating direction is clearly positive.

However, the current market price already reflects very optimistic assumptions about growth, margins, and capital efficiency. With a limited margin of safety and a short post-2020 track record, the risk-reward is unattractive for a long-term value investor.

In short, Limbach is a good business, but not a good investment at the March 2025 price.

Outlook for Malaysian equities lifted on stronger Ringgit and fund flows – MBSB Research

According to MBSB Research, Malaysian equities are expected to trend higher in 2026, due to support by the stronger Ringgit as well as return of foreign funds. The firmer Ringgit has helped attract foreign investors back into the local equity market, with the RM ending January at RM3.94 against the US dollar.

Foreign fund inflows at the end of last month totalling RM1 billion is likely to contribute to better local equity prices. MBSB Research expects valuation multiples to move closer to long-term averages and has revised its 2026 equity market targets higher. It raised its FBM KLCI 2026 target to 1,850 points from 1,750 points. The research house also lifted its FBM Emas Shariah target to 13,200 points and its FBM 70 target to 19,100 points.

It noted that the prospects of declining US dollar interest rates may encourage some investors to redirect their funds to countries/regions with more stable interest rates.

Concerns over the US economy have also eased after the US Federal Reserve struck a more optimistic tone in its January policy statement. The Federal Open Market Committee had said economic activity is expanding at a solid pace and noted signs of stabilisation in the labour market, reducing worries of a near-term slowdown.

MBSB Research maintained its view that Malaysia’s economy will grow 4.3% in 2026, while market consensus expects FBM KLCI earnings to rise 7.7% y-o-y.

However, it noted that risks remain, including the possibility of a US economic slowdown amid lingering labour market weakness and ongoing geopolitical uncertainties in Eastern Europe, the Middle East and East Asia.

And while not foreseen, major escalations that significantly heighten the kinetic intensity and broaden the geographical theatre of war could substantially magnify the potential economic fallout onto the wider world.

Its top picks include 99 Speed Mart, Capital A and Aeon based on improved earnings from the Visit Malaysia 2026 campaign and expected strong consumer spending.

Another RM100 SARA to be credited via MyKad from Feb 9 - Amir Hamzah

According to Finance Minister II Datuk Seri Amir Hamzah Azizan, the government will begin distributing a second one-off RM100 Sumbangan Asas Rahmah (SARA) to all eligible Malaysian citizens starting Feb 9, with a total allocation of RM2.2 billion.

He said the assistance will be automatically credited to recipients' MyKad and can be used until Dec 31 2026, without the need for any application. He was speaking in the Dewan Rakyat during ministerial question time.

He added that in 2025, nearly 5.6 million monthly SARA recipients used their MyKad to purchase essential goods at registered premises, reflecting a utilisation rate of 99%. Total transaction value reached RM4.8 billion out of the RM5 billion allocated.

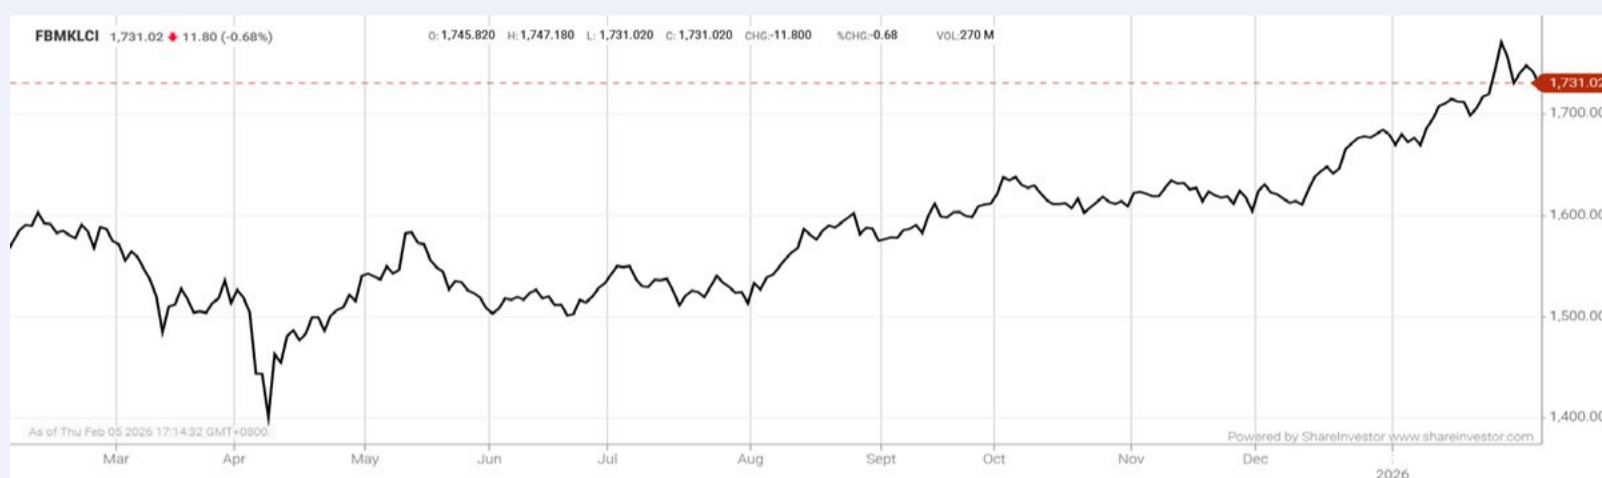

For the one-off SARA payment that was announced in September 2025, more than 21 million Malaysians, or 96% of total recipients, made purchases, generating transactions exceeding RM2.05 billion in the local market.

He said that the RM150 million in unspent or unclaimed one-off SARA funds for 2025 will be reallocated to targeted groups, including residents of protection centres and students with disabilities and special needs, for the purchase of medical devices for poor patients, as well as for the establishment and strengthening of student food banks.

He noted that the reallocation aims to ensure transparency and efficiency in public fund management while strengthening the country's social protection system, particularly for vulnerable groups.

EYE ON THE MARKETS

THE PERILS OF SINGLE CUSTOMER CONCENTRATION RISK

In today's fast-paced business environment, PLCs must strive to develop multiple business channels or clientele, or even diversify their business base within their realm of expertise, to reduce business risk.

This will enable them to circumvent the pitfalls of single customer concentration risk, whereby they are subject to financial vulnerability, which is a situation where a large percentage of revenue and profit (typically >50%) is dependent on one or a handful of clients.

In a nutshell, having a limited customer base equals high business risk. It creates earnings risk, cash flow risk, reduces bargaining power, lowers company valuation, and can lead to business failure if that client leaves.

Generally, if a single major customer accounts for 50% or more of revenue and profit, a high-risk, low-diversification situation exists. This can spark earnings volatility, with the loss of a primary client triggering an immediate, existential crisis that may prompt abrupt cost-cutting or layoffs.

Given such challenges, it is imperative for boards to shoulder the responsibility of providing the necessary oversight and guidance by resetting business direction (if it has gone off tangent) while closely overseeing management implementation.

MASSIVE PROSPECT DOWNGRADE

One relevant example is uncertainty surrounding ACE Market-listed SMRT Holdings Bhd, after its management recently revealed that its deployment pace for Tenaga Nasional Berhad (TNB) is expected to slow materially in the coming years following the opening up of TNB's Supervisory Control and Data Acquisition (SCADA) vendor base.

With this possible increase in vendor base, SMRT may face greater competition in tendering for new deployment contracts with its major customer, which may result in a slowdown in one-off revenue from deployments.

This came as a negative surprise as it indicates a sharp earnings reset ahead for the IoT (Internet of Things) solutions outfit. This is given that 38% of SMRT's earnings were previously driven by one-off deployment revenue, with managed services contributing the remaining 62%.

As a reference, TNB contributed 68% (RM47.65 million) of SMRT's RM65.77 million revenue in FY2024.

Against such a backdrop, it is little wonder that Hong Leong Investment Bank (HLIB) Research, in its research note dated 19 January, downgraded the stock to "Sell" from "Buy" and set a drastically lower target price (-72.4%) of 32 sen, down from RM1.24 previously.

The downgrade coupled with a massive slash in target price sent SMRT's share price down by 65% or 29 sen to a three-year low of 15.5 sen before paring losses to end that day 58.43% or 26 sen lower at 18.5 sen.

HLIB Research further substantiated that its previous “buy” thesis on SMRT was anchored on earnings upside from TNB, driven by a large pool of unconnected sites and TNB’s Smart Grid roll-out.

As new site deployment is now expected to slow materially amid greater competition, HLIB said its earlier thesis was no longer intact, notwithstanding growth from the financial services industry and early-stage penetration into Indonesia’s power sector, which could provide alternative earnings drivers given the limited upside in these areas.

SMRT UNPERTURBED

On the same day that HLIB Research published its report on SMRT, three institutional investors walked away from the Company.

Aberdeen Group PLC disposed of its entire 6.63% stake, or 30.04 million shares, followed by Urusharta Jamaah Sdn Bhd (a special purpose vehicle set up under the Ministry of Finance) and the Employees Provident Fund Board (EPF), which ceased to be substantial shareholders on the same day after disposing of 35.75 million shares and 20.99 million shares, respectively.

While acknowledging that the Group may face greater competition in tendering for new deployment contracts with its major customer (TNB), SMRT reassured investors that it is on BAU (business as usual) with TNB, and that the anticipated slowdown in revenue will affect only the one-off deployment segment.

SMRT stated that the Group will continue tendering for new deployment contracts with its major customer while continuing to provide managed services to existing sites – a recurring income stream for the Group.

It emphasised that it is unable to quantify the impact on its revenue from FY2027 onwards, as this depends on the timing and volume of future deployment contracts awarded to the Company.

Additionally, the Group continues to expand its footprints beyond Malaysia into Indonesia and the Philippines, with revenue from foreign customers having grown to RM11.3 million in FY2025 from RM9.9 million earlier, supported by both managed services and deployment activities to foreign customers.

PURSUE MULTI-DIMENSIONAL DIVERSIFICATION

Taking a leaf from SMRT, it is imperative that PLCs be aware and not take lightly the risk of relying on a single customer base whose financial contribution could dictate the sole survival of a PLC.

Another notable example is electronics manufacturing service (EMS) provider WaveFront Bhd (formerly ATA IMS Bhd), which at one time relied too heavily on Dyson before the UK consumer product brand terminated its dealings due to labour concerns.

Since Dyson's termination, Wavefront has been struggling to return to its former glory days. Revenue slid from RM4.22 billion in FY2021 (before the termination) to RM2.6 billion and further to RM273.04 million in FY2025. The Company has been in the red for the past four years.

PLCs should humbly accept that concentration risk is fundamentally multi-dimensional, for it extends beyond simple, single-name exposure to encompass a variety of interconnected/intertwined and often hidden factors that can threaten the financial stability of a business entity.

These risks can be categorised into various dimensions, including name, sector, geography, and technology stack, which require a holistic approach to identification and mitigation.

In a nutshell, effective management requires a multi-dimensional approach, including tracking top-customer revenue, diversifying across geographies and sectors, and using stress testing to identify hidden dependencies.

At the end of the day, proactive, multi-dimensional assessment goes a long way in aligning portfolio strategies with the overall risk appetite.

DEFINITION: Insider Activity shows the trades made by substantial shareholders or directors of the company. Purchases by the directors and company share buyback may indicate the share price is undervalued and brings confidence to the price trend of the share price.
