Viant Tech:

The Upside Is Real, But So Is the Execution Risk

SUMMARY

- Viant Technology Inc. (Nasdaq: DSP) operates a demand side platform within the fast-growing US digital advertising sector, supported by strong industry tailwinds and resilient demand.
- After post-IPO losses, the company turned profitable in 2024, with a cost structure that enables operating leverage as revenue grows.
- Compared to larger AdTech peers, Viant lags in scale, margins, and returns, highlighting the importance of size in this industry.

BACKGROUND

Viant provides a technology platform that enables data-driven, privacy-conscious digital advertising across the open web. At its core, the company is an advertising software provider, with its flagship product, Adelphic, serving as a demand-side platform (DSP). Adelphic allows marketers and advertising agencies to plan, buy, and measure digital advertising campaigns across multiple channels.

Although Viant went public in 2021 as an advertising software company, it has since repositioned itself as a more technology-driven, cloud-based advertising platform. Despite this shift in positioning, its core DSP offering and related services have remained largely unchanged.

Currently, all of Viant's revenue is generated from the United States.

OPERATING PERFORMANCE

Viant operates within the digital advertising and marketing technology sector, a high-growth industry. Various market research reports indicate strong and sustained demand for digital advertising solutions in the U.S.

From 2018 to 2024, Viant's revenue grew at a compound annual rate of 17.8%. Although there was a temporary dip in 2022, the company rebounded strongly, delivering a 31% year-over-year revenue increase in 2024. This highlights both the resilience of its business model and the underlying demand for its platform.

Importantly, this growth is particularly powerful in the context of Viant's post-IPO cost structure. Following its IPO, Viant reported operating losses from 2021 to 2023, before turning profitable with an operating income of USD3.5 million in 2024.

This earlier period of losses was primarily due to the company operating below its breakeven level (refer to the right side of Chart 1).

Chart 1: Margins and Operating Profit

a. SGA margin = Selling, Administration, and General expenses/Revenue.

b. I broke down the operating profits into fixed costs and variable costs.

- Fixed cost = SGA, Depreciation & Amortization, and R&D.
- Variable cost = Cost of Sales – Depreciation & Amortization.
- Contribution = Revenue – Variable Cost.
- Contribution margin = Contribution/Revenue.

Viant’s cost structure is characterized by a relatively high proportion of fixed costs, which account for slightly more than half of total costs. In such a structure, revenue growth tends to translate into disproportionately higher operating profit once scale is achieved.

Notably, the fixed cost margin in 2024 is lower than in 2021. A significant component of fixed costs is Selling, General, and Administrative (SG&A) expenses. As shown on the left side of Chart 1, SG&A margins have declined meaningfully since 2022, while gross profit margins have remained relatively stable.

These findings suggest that Viant is on a clear path toward sustained profitability. This is underpinned by its consistent revenue growth and a cost structure that supports operating leverage.

PEER COMPARISON

I benchmarked Viant against selected AdTech peers with significant exposure to the US market. These include:

- Magnite - a leading sell-side platform focused on video and CTV monetization.
- MediaAlpha - a U.S.-focused vertical-specific customer acquisition platform.

- Perion Network - a diversified AdTech firm with strong U.S. revenue contribution and a key Microsoft partnership.
- The Trade Desk - a dominant independent DSP with strength in programmatic advertising, particularly in connected TV.

Compared to them, Viant had the smallest 2024 revenue and one of the lowest 2018 to 2023 growth rates. Although Viant's performance has been improving, its financial quality still lags behind that of its listed peer.

Viant recorded one of the weakest returns on capital over this period. While its EBIT margin has recovered from the 2022 trough, it remains the lowest among the peer group in 2024, as competitors have also improved their margins.

Notably, these peers not only generate significantly higher revenues but also achieve stronger growth rates. This suggests that scale is a key advantage in the AdTech industry. Larger players are better positioned to benefit from operating efficiencies, attract higher-quality demand, and reinvest at superior returns - factors that likely underpin their stronger profitability and capital returns.

Viant also posted one of the weakest levered free cash flow margins over the past four years, while its EPS performance can be considered average at best.

FINANCIAL POSITION

Viant's financial position as of the end of Sept 2025 reflects a strong balance sheet with a solid foundation characterized by liquidity strength, prudent leverage, and disciplined capital allocation.

- As of the end of Sept 2025, it had USD161 million of cash and short-term investments, equivalent to about 41% of its total assets that were held as cash.
- It had a low Debt Equity ratio of 9% at the end of Sep 2025.

- From 2018 to 2024, there was only one year when it failed to deliver a positive cash flow from operations. During this period, it generated USD150 million in cash flow from operations, compared to the cumulative loss of USD78 million.
- Post-IPO, it had an average of USD 5 million per year of Reinvestment. I defined Reinvestment = CAPEX & Acquisitions – Depreciation & Amortization + increase in Net Working Capital. This is low because a part of the CAPEX & Acquisition was offset by the Depreciation & Amortization. This is a good sign because as the company scales up, a big part of the profits could be returned to shareholders or used to reduce debt.
- It had a reasonable capital allocation plan, as shown in Table 2. The cash flow from operations was more than sufficient to fund its acquisition and CAPEX, with the excess used to reduce debt and returned to shareholders.

VALUATION

In valuing Viant, I adopted a set of base assumptions grounded in its post-IPO operating profile.

I used 2024 revenue as the starting point. The contribution margin, capital efficiency, and reinvestment rate were assumed to be in line with post-IPO averages. Fixed costs were also based on post-IPO levels but assumed to grow at 4% annually. A tax rate of 24% was applied throughout.

To reflect uncertainty in future growth, I considered two revenue scenarios.

Scenario 1: Conservative Case

Revenue is assumed to grow at 9% in Year 1, tapering linearly to a long-term growth rate of 4% by Year 6. This is anchored on Viant's post-IPO CAGR of 9%, representing a more cautious outlook.

Scenario 2: Moderate Case

Revenue is assumed to grow at 13% in Year 1, also tapering to 4% by Year 6. The 13% starting point reflects the midpoint between the 9% post-IPO CAGR and the 18% CAGR achieved from 2018 to 2024, capturing potential upside if stronger historical growth trends continue.

Based on these assumptions, the estimated intrinsic values are:

- USD 11 per share under Scenario 1
- USD 25 per share under Scenario 2

With the market price at USD9 per share (as of Sep 2025), both scenarios provide some margin of safety. Given Viant's revenue growth track record, Scenario 2 appears to be the more realistic case. (Refer to the original article for details of the valuation.)

CONCLUSION

Viant operates in a structurally attractive and growing segment of the digital advertising market. Its core DSP platform, Adelphic, and focus on privacy-conscious, data-driven advertising provide a relevant value proposition in an evolving digital ecosystem.

While Viant currently lags its larger peers in terms of scale, profitability, and returns on capital, the gap appears to be more a function of size and maturity rather than structural weakness. The company's post-IPO performance shows clear signs of operating leverage, with improving margins, disciplined cost management, and a return to operating profitability in 2024.

Importantly, Viant's cost structure provides meaningful upside potential. As revenue scales, a larger share of incremental revenue should flow through to operating profit, supporting a transition toward sustained profitability.

The company is also supported by a strong balance sheet, low leverage, and modest reinvestment needs. This combination provides financial flexibility and the potential for future shareholder returns once the business reaches greater scale.

Valuation-wise, the stock appears fairly priced under a conservative growth scenario but offers a reasonable margin of safety under a more moderate growth outlook. Given its historical growth track record and recent rebound, the moderate scenario appears more reflective of its underlying potential.

I am a long-term value investor who has held onto stocks for more than 5 years. My analysis and valuation are from such a perspective. I consider quarterly results "noisy" and focus on long-term trends.

Buy rebounding laggards, stay defensive as US-Iran ceasefire uncertainty lingers - MBSB Research

According to MBSB Research, investors can take advantage of the rebound in laggard sectors such as construction and consumer following the US-Iran ceasefire, as long as the situation remains stable, while also allocating funds to defensive stocks as a safeguard against potential renewed tensions.

The research house stated in a note that defensive stocks provide stable dividends that help limit downside risks and may also offer price appreciation due to undervaluation.

It noted that markets had reacted positively to the news showing improved investor sentiment on previously weak sectors like construction, consumer, technology, finance, and real estate investment trusts (REITs). These sectors had risen on Wednesday after weeks of volatility.

The KLCON Index rose 2.5%, KLTEC gained 4%, consumer stocks up 2.1%, and REITs climbed 1.8%. However, all indices retreated in early morning trade on Thursday, highlighting the continued volatility and uncertainty in the market.

The research house noted that investors can continue exploring laggard sectors amid improving sentiment, provided there is no breakdown in US-Iran negotiations that could trigger renewed escalation. However, given the ongoing uncertain outlook, it advises maintaining exposure to defensive sectors for protection.

Its top laggard picks include Gamuda Bhd, Mr DIY Group (M) Bhd, Pavilion Real Estate Investment Trust, Mah Sing Group Bhd, CelcomDigi Bhd, Hong Leong Bank Bhd and Tasco Bhd.

Among its preferred defensive stocks are YTL Power International Bhd, Tenaga Nasional Bhd, 99 Speed Mart Retail Holdings Bhd and QL Resources Bhd, all of which offer stable dividends and undervaluation potential.

ASEAN+3 Confronts Severe Energy Shock from a Position of Strength

AMRO released its annual flagship report, the ASEAN+3 Regional Economic Outlook (AREO) 2026, projecting regional growth of 4.0 percent in both 2026 and 2027. While the region has been supported by stronger-than-expected growth, low inflation, and improved external buffers, the ongoing conflict in the Middle East and disruptions to the global energy supply have materially increased downside risks to the outlook.

According to AMRO Chief Economist Dong He, the ASEAN+3 region entered 2026 from a position of strength, but the Middle East conflict has shifted the balance of risks to the downside. The region is better placed than in earlier episodes to navigate an energy shock - its economies are more energy-efficient and less oil-dependent, entered this period with low inflation, and most retain meaningful policy space to respond.

The region expanded by 4.3 percent in 2025, well above the 3.8 percent projected in the immediate aftermath of the April 2025 tariff shock. Economic activity remained supported by firm domestic demand, robust exports - boosted by AI-driven semiconductor demand - sustained investment, and strengthening intraregional economic linkages. Amid higher global energy prices, AREO 2026 forecasts headline inflation to rise from 0.9 percent in 2025 to 1.4 percent in 2026 and 1.5 percent in 2027.

The impact of the Middle East conflict on the region will hinge on its duration. If prolonged, the shock could become more widespread and persistent, extending beyond energy markets to affect industrial inputs, logistics, food prices, tourism, and remittances. Its effects are also likely to vary across member economies depending on their exposure to imported energy and key commodities, available buffers, and domestic policy space.

He added that as the global economy is battered by one shock after another, preserving policy flexibility is critical to preventing worse outcomes such as stagflation. Central banks should maintain orderly market conditions and financial stability, and act decisively should supply shocks lead to sustained inflation. On the fiscal side, governments should prioritize targeted support for vulnerable groups, while avoiding broad-based measures that could fuel inflation or undermine fiscal sustainability.

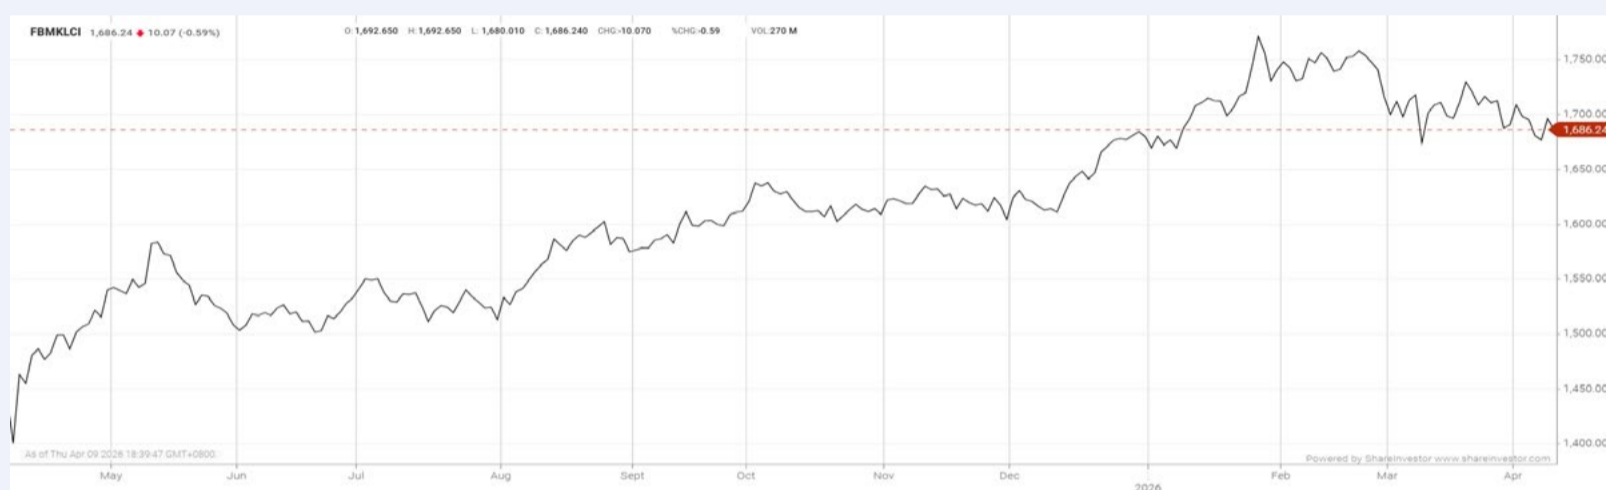

Meanwhile, the report also highlights a fundamental structural transformation underpinning the region's resilience. Over the past two decades, ASEAN+3 has become more regionally anchored, with denser and more interconnected production networks and a decisive shift toward intraregional sources of demand. The share of the region's value-added exports to the US has declined from about one-third to 20 percent, while the share absorbed within the region has risen to nearly 30 percent.

ASEAN+3 is now the world's largest market, accounting for 28 percent of global final demand. He noted that the long-standing view of the region as the world's factory - producing primarily for external demand outside the region - is increasingly outdated. Deepening regional cooperation, accelerating the green transition, and maintaining open trade and investment flows will be essential to sustaining this structural transformation and strengthening resilience. Click this link for the AREO 2026 report.

CORPORATE DYSFUNCTION AT NEXG: THE REAL VICTIMS ARE MINORITY SHAREHOLDERS

Security-based ICT solutions provider NexG Berhad (formerly Datasonic Group Berhad) has in recent months, hogged headlines for the wrong reasons – from the much politicised "Corporate Mafia" allegation to significant financial losses and a high-stakes boardroom power struggle that peaked in March 2026.

Amid all the corporate brouhaha, one oft-overlooked predicament stands out – the erosion of the company's value amid the constant boardroom tussle/changes with monies spent to "invest" in non-core activities. Beyond the predicament, the reality is far simpler – minority shareholders are the ones bearing the real and lasting damage.

BOARDROOM TURMOIL, LEGAL BATTLES

2026 has been an eventful year – again for the wrong reason – for NexG.

At the outset, the Group shocked the market on 25 February 2026 with a massive fair value loss of RM145.6 million recorded in Q3FY2026 ended 31 December 2025. This led to an RM130.88 million net loss recorded for the quarter.

On 5 March, its executive chairman and CEO Datuk Abu Hanifah Noordin, was briefly suspended to facilitate an internal review of the massive investment losses.

On the same day, Hanifah, Siti Nur Aishah Ishak and Velocity Capital Sdn Bhd, with a combined shareholding of not less than 10% of the total issued share capital of the Company, propose to hold an extraordinary general meeting (EGM) on 3 April 2026 to remove seven directors and appoint eight candidates, including Datuk Ishak Ismail who controls Raya Aviation Holdings that emerged as NexG's largest shareholder on 4 March.

Following this, on 9 March, Hanifah and Siti Nur Aishah served a Writ of Summons and Statement of Claim to the Company and its directors. Swiftly after the notice was served, seven directors resigned en masse while the legal suit was lifted.

At the same time, Hanifah was reinstated. A new board lineup has since been formed with businessman Ishak emerging as the new executive chairman, and Hanifah redesignated as the deputy executive chairman.

It was at this juncture that the talk-of-the-town "Corporate Mafia" hype sprouted. On 10 March, Hanifah spilt the beans that he was targeted by "Corporate Mafia" figures attempting to force him out and hijack RM300 million in government contract components to be subcontracted to competitor HeiTech Padu Berhad.

Soon after, this became the talk of towns, dominating news headlines across the nation. As of now, a dozen parties were reportedly involved in the “Corporate Mafia” plot with everyone claiming innocence.

NexG’s constant boardroom changes were traced back to October 2025.

Tan Sri Mohd Khairul Adib Abd Rahman, the then executive deputy chairman, resigned from his duties on 14 October 2025. A day later, three directors, including an executive director, relinquished their roles from the Company.

A month later, eight new directors, whom Hanifah later claimed were not clear “whose interests these individuals ultimately represented”, joined the Board in November 2025.

STRATEGIC VS SPECULATIVE SHARE INVESTMENT

The centre of the saga revolves around write-down in quoted investments recognised in Q3FY2026, stemming from NexG’s investments in MMAG Holdings Berhad and NexG Bina Berhad (formerly lingerie manufacturer Classita Holdings Berhad).

NexG had spent RM88 million to buy 220 million shares or a 9.53% stake in MMAG at 40 sen each in March 2025, but the share price of the integrated supply chain management provider has since plunged 93.8% to close at 2.5 sen last Friday (March 27).

The Group next bought a 32.61% stake in the then Classita Holdings in August 2025 at 15 sen apiece, along with 414.31 million warrants at between 3.5 sen and 4 sen each for RM76.78 million. Similarly, the share price of the property developer has also plummeted to 2.5 sen apiece while its warrant price has skidded to one sen.

In response to the massive paper losses, a special board meeting was held on 11 March 2026 pursuant to its investments in MMAG and NexG Bina. Nonetheless, the Company has since declared such concerns as “a closed matter”.

“Following the resignations of seven directors..., the Board concluded that the fair value losses matter had been thoroughly ventilated, reviewed and accepted by the Audit and Risk Management Committee and the Board at the respective meetings to review the quarterly report for the financial period ended 31 December 2025," the Group said in a Bursa Malaysia filing dated 18 March 2026.

With the scarce information it provided, it is little wonder that such a response did not sit well with shareholders, as the value of investments dissipated like hot air. Already, these acquisitions have drawn scepticism since day one as they appear to stray from NexG's core activities, let alone the plummeting share prices now.

OPERATIONAL, GOVERNANCE RISKS

The aforementioned boardroom power struggle in recent months has led shareholders to question the stability of NexG's business and operations, and to question the board as an effective governance mechanism.

Let us not forget that NexG also saw changes in its external auditors since early 2026 with Baker Tilly resigning and SBY Partners declining to take over, hence resulting in the appointment of PKF PLT.

Dependency and high concentration of government contracts with nearly all its revenue coming from government contracts (passports, national ID) is yet another concern. While this provides stability, it also means policy changes or failure to secure renewals could severely impact the Group.

Above all else, both NexG and subsidiaries under its umbrella, notably NexG Bina, have faced legal challenges, including legal challenges and freezing of their bank accounts by authorities.

NO WINNER IN THIS GAME

These ebb and flow of boardroom shuffles happened right after NexG secured major public contracts worth close to RM2.5 billion in August and early October. These contracts are expected to sustain NexG's earnings visibility over the next six years, after living off short-term extensions of contracts for the past few years.

Despite the good news, NexG is embroiled in an unprecedented crisis with things falling apart one after another. The counter is now closed at 27 sen (30 March), the lowest since April 2025.

Now the chronicle implicated not just corporate executives, but political figures and various authority bodies. As more parties are drawn into the saga, things become convoluted, with remarks and allegations flying back and forth. They all claimed they were wronged, but minority shareholders suffer the brunt.
